2. Citations and explanations:

The documents cited in the search report represent the prior art. The claimed invention according to claims 1-10 is not considered to be anticipated by these documents. None of the documents nor any relevant combination of them reveal a method for launching of a catapult, a catapult or a locking device for a catapult as described by the claims.

Accordingly, the invention according to claims 1-10 is novel and is considered to involve an inventive step. The invention is industrially applicable.
